CCC CAMP EMPLOYING 200 TO OPEN IN MARION CO.

COUNCIL VOTES REJECTION OF 2 ZONE SHIFTS

Requests for Moving Business Places from Residence Districts Voted Down.

Rejection of two requests for transfer of residential properties into the commercial zone, after considerable discussion including charges that there is a disregard of the zoning ordinance, featured last night's meeting of council in city hall.

The property transfers were in opposite ends of the city. One had been protested by residents of the vicinity but the other had brought no complaints.

Councilman D. R. Biggert was the only one casting his vote in favor of both transfers.

"I can't see why in the world we should stand in the way of any citizen's right who wants to make a decent use of his property," he said.

Later during discussion, he said: "It is still a free America — I hope."

At another point after Councilman W. P. Cass had warned there might soon be several requests for transfer of welding shops to the commercial district and suggested council do something in advance, Mr. Biggert commented that he thought Mr. Cass was unduly alarmed.

"There apparently are being no transfers passed here," he said.

The property transfer which had been opposed by some residents of the neighborhood involved a combined residence and grocery store at the southeast corner of Church street and Pennsylvania avenue, owned by F. R. Lawrence. It was rejected 8-1. The unopposed transfer involved a property at 481 Park boulevard, owned by James L. Evans who has used part of it as a coal yard since November. It was rejected 6-3. A three-fourths favorable vote is required.

Other Council Business

Other matters before council:

To finance repairs to North State street school for use as a relief center $1,000 was transferred within the special WPA fund.

Councilman Cass asked council to give serious consideration to an occupational tax for financing relief and WPA.

Copies of the WPA traffic survey were distributed, with advice from Mayor Snare to give them consideration. Meetings with representative citizen groups are possible.

A protest was received against the American Malleable Casting company's request for closing an alley and part of Hoyle street.

Action on Transfers

Consideration of the transfer of the Lawrence property began as the legislation was given its third and final reading. Attorney J. D. Williamson represented Mr. Lawrence. After considerable discussion the vote was taken, some of the councilmen declaring they voted no with the understanding that the store could continue operating and that repairs could be made even though the property is in the residential zone. The vote was eight no and one yes, Mr. Biggert casting the dissenting vote.

Attorney Williamson, opening his arguments, traced the history of the property from its original location in a residential zone. For a time it was in the commercial zone, housing a grocery. Later it was vacated and transferred back to the residential zone.

The present store has been in operation two years. This is possible, even though the property is in the residential zone, because part of the building is used as a residence. Under the old zoning ordinance such a situation is permissable. The new zoning ordinance, passed late in 1939, which provides that a property must be used exclusively as a residence to be in the residential zone, does not affect the Lawrence store which was in operation before the new ordinance was passed.

Changes Uncertain

Whether Mr. Lawrence can make desired changes to the exterior of his property and still operate the grocery store in the

FARLEY WON'T RUN IN OHIO

Democrats Put Finishing Touches on Slate of Convention Delegates.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., March 12—Threats of opposition removed, the Ohio Democratic organization today put finishing touches on its slate of 44 district delegates and 16 delegates-at-large to the party's national convention in Chicago July 15.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who had been urged to contest for the 52 Ohio votes, declined to enter the primary on grounds that the Ohio delegation would be free to support him for the presidential nomination if President Roosevelt elected not to seek a third term.

The state organization delegates although nominally pledged to National Committeeman Charles Sawyer as a "favorite son" presidential candidate, would be agreed to support the President if he sought renomination.

Farley's decision was announced by Francis W. Poulson of Cleveland, former state chairman who backed the Farley movement in an apparently unsuccessful effort to force Sawyer to put him on the convention delegation.

Poulson's name was missing from the list of six delegates selected last night to represent the three districts in the Cleveland area. Previously Sawyer denied Poulson a place among the delegates-at-large.

Sawyer indicated that he would be ready to announce the complete slate of Ohio delegates by Thursday.

Filings for office continued. Kenneth B. Johnston, Columbus attorney, filed for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, and Rep. John Vorys, Republican, of the 12th congressional district, filed for renomination.

Donahey To See President

A movement to draft Gregg Holbrook, Hamilton attorney, for the Democratic Third district congressional race developed at Dayton. The district now is represented by Harry N. Routzohn, Republican.

FRANCE HAS 50,000 TROOPS FOR FINLAND

Men Ready To Go When Helsinki Sends Word.

By The Associated Press

PARIS, March 12—Premier Daladier told the chamber of deputies today that 50,000 French troops were ready to go to Finland if Finland publicly asked for help against Soviet Russia.

These troops, the premier said, have been ready since Feb. 26—equipped and assembled near embarcation points.

Daladier said that the British-French decision to aid Finland in case she called for help was reached at the meeting of the supreme war council Feb. 2.

At the premier's request the deputies postponed their scheduled interpellation on the Finnish situation until next Tuesday, March 19.

Daladier, who conferred earlier in the day with the Finnish minister, Dr. Harri Holma, declared he expected at any moment to receive from the Finnish government a communication "in one sense or the other."

LONDON, March 12—The British government has sent a number of communications to Finland offering assistance on an enlarged scale, foreign office sources disclosed today.

These sources refused to say when the first note was sent, but they emphasized that the communications began "well before" the start of the Russian-Finnish peace negotiations.

OFFICER SHOOTS GIRL, THEN ENDS OWN LIFE

Constable Invades Bedroom To Kill Young Pupil.

By The Associated Press

IRONTON, O., March 12—With the blunt assertion, "you know what I told you last night," Constable Bert Mays, 28, shot to death Eloise Roberts, 15-year-old Kitts Hill High school student, and then killed himself at dawn today in her bedroom.

Coroner W. W. Lynd returned a verdict of murder and suicide. He said Mrs. Mays told him that her husband had been "running around" with the Roberts girl since last November. Both families lived at Dog Fork, 12 miles north of here.

Sadie Roberts, 30-year-old blind sister sleeping with Eloise, related that Mays walked into their bedroom, awakened the girl and said only, "you know what I told you last night,"' before firing a revolver shot into her head.

Mays then turned the gun on his own head and stumbled out of the house. He died two hours later in General hospital here.

Lynd was informed that the Lawrence township constable had been in the habit of going to the Roberts home each morning to drive Eloise's brother, Ned, to work at a tile company here. Mays also was employed there.

Members of the Roberts family declined to discuss the girl's reported "affair" with Mays, who was the father of two children.

FINNS STAYING ON IN MOSCOW

Peace Delegation Has Not Left Red Capital, Danish Reports Indicate.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

LONDON, March 12—The British Broadcasting company today broadcast a message from its Stockholm observer stating that an agreement had been reached between Finland and Russia although no treaty had been signed and terms of the peace were not made public.

COPENHAGEN, March 12—The Finnish news agency announced today that it was authorized to state that the Finnish delegation still was in Moscow and that negotiations looking toward ending the Finnish-Russian war were continuing.

This was accepted as supporting the general belief in Scandinavia today that the Russians had sharpened their demands.

Optimism still was prevalent, however, and stock exchanges continued a lively upwards swing in the Scandinavian capitals.

The Scandinavian press speculated on the possibility that Britain's offer of help for Finland, announced by Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday, might be interfering with the progress of peace talks.

Fear Allied Aid

One theory expressed was that the offer increased Russian apprehensions regarding possible British intention of creating a "northern front" and thereby strengthened Russian determination to obtain certain defense points in Finland.

Yesterday some Scandinavian quarters had characterized the British offer to help as a "last attempt to stop peace" in Finland, reasoning that Britain and France would regard such a peace as a blow to their war against Germany.

In Stockholm today the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet declared sarcastically that the only possibility of assisting Finland would be "non-intervention on a scale comparable to the Spanish war" with Swedish volunteer troops fighting for Finland.

This newspaper added:

"The western powers must be made to understand that their intervention will not be tolerated by Norway and Sweden. We do not want to see Scandinavia made into a battlefield for the allies' northern flank. And we have not

Enforcement Regarded As Biggest Traffic Problem

Authors of Survey Say Officials Generally Fail To Appreciate Importance of Traffic Violations.

This is the second in a series of articles dealing with the report of the recently completed WPA traffic survey in Marion.

Enforcement is usually the weakest link in the chain of traffic problem correction.

So states the report of the WPA traffic survey of Marion.

This has been due, to a great extent, to the lack of willingness on the part of police officials to concede the importance of traffic violations in relation to other illegal activities, the authors of the report declare.

The lack of appreciation of the problem's importance "also extends throughout the official family", the report says, pointing to the fact that the fire department received almost twice as much money as the police department while economic losses due to accidents averages three to five times the loss by fire.

Court's Responsibility

The authors of the report declare that contrary to most public opinion, actual enforcement does not start with the arrest of the violator but "rests solely on the courts."

Any laxity in penalizing the guilty nullifies the efforts of the police, according to the report. The police legally are "bailiffs ex-officio" of the court.

As for police efforts—"Sporadic drives have little, if any, lasting effect...." A consistent program is deemed absolutely essential.

Investigations Urged

There should be a systematic investigation of accidents by competent men, since it is conservatively estimated that 90 per cent of all accidents have a violation of the law as a contributing factor. Less than 10 per cent of the "accident" motorists reach courts. Complete records should be kept, showing types of violations most frequent, locations where violations occur and in general to provide information for any possible needed amendments to traffic rules.

The report considers the Marion police department too small (17 men at that time) to cover 90 miles of streets.

"Enforcement of sundry parking regulations and restrictions has been by sporadic drive to obtain partial enforcement of all areas," the report states. "Daily observations.... have disclosed much disregarding of violators of ordinances that are still in existence and as such should be enforced. Principally among these tolerated infractions is double line parking and overtime parking."

Tag System Criticized

The report is critical of the traffic tag system here and recommends a new one as stated in a previous article.

"There are a large number of tickets in the files of the police department which have been issued, but we were unable to find any evidence of a consistent policy of issuing warrants for those violators who failed to appear within the time specified by the ticket," the report states. The failure to enforce by prosecution has created an impression of disdain and ridicule in the minds of motorists, and has resulted in an attitude of indifference to restrictions and regulations."

"It is felt that the present system is weak in that the present type of police notice does not constitute a legal affidavit upon which arrest can be made.

The traffic bureau should be strictly under the direction of the court.

"Vulnerable" to Favoritism

"The failure of purpose (of the traffic tag system) is due to the fact that this system has proven vulnerable to those persons interested in bartering for favors at the expense of law enforcement," the report states.

Of 442 tickets issued in 1938 only 169 or 39.3 per cent were paid. Others were cancelled by officials or suspended.

As for the court, the report states:

"An analysis of the traffic cases in the court for the year 1938 shows an apparent failure to keep step with the rapid increase in the number of vehicles using our

Already a large number of the candidates who have informally announced their candidacies have filed their formal declarations, but there are still many to come.

Civic Orchestra Prepares for Final Rehearsal Before Thursday Concert

The Marion Civic orchestra, under the direction of Abram Ruvinsky of Columbus, will hold its final rehearsal for Thursday night's concert on Wednesday night in the orchestra room at the Y. M. C. A.

Appearing with the orchestra as the guest singer will be Miss Margaret Speaks, Ohio born radio and concert artist.

When the orchestra takes its place on the stage at the Palace theater Thursday evening it will be to climax months and weeks of intensive study and rehearsal with a program of outstanding merit both from a musical and entertainment standpoint. Director Ruvinsky is higly pleased with the work of the orchestra and has expressed himself as being delighted with the program chosen by Miss Speaks.

The work of modern and favorite old composers make up the orchestra's program. Particularly oustanding is the Tschaikowsky "Overture 1812" which will close the program. The overture commemorates the war between Napoleon and Russia. In it is heard the "Marseillaise" and other national airs and folks songs and the bells in the kremlin towers ring out effectively proclaiming the repulsion of the invading armies.

Thursday evening's concert marks the first time the orchestra has played in the theater since its organization several years ago. Holders of season and single admission tickets are urged to make their reservations as early as possible, Mrs. Robert Y. Smith, president of the Woman's Symphony board, sponsors of the orchestra, announced today. Tickets are available at the theater at any time. There is no charge for reservations.

Man Jailed On Charge of Theft Filed by Mother

Pleading guilty to a petit larceny charge filed by his mother, Hugh Walters Jr., 31, of south of Marion was sentenced to 30 days in the county jail yesterday afternoon.

Municipal Judge Hazen, before whom Walters entered the plea also fined him $200 and costs but suspened $175 of the fine on condition that Walters stay out of court in the future.

Mrs. Margaret Walters, who filed the charge, charged that her son stole $25 from her purse at the Walters farm home last week.

The sentence yesterday was the second time in 10 days that Walters has been committed to jail.

On March 1, he was cited for contempt of court when he appeared in a Delaware court to fight divorce procedings brought by his wife, allegedly with "an odor of liquor on his breath." Common Pleas Judge Frederick Wickham who was hearing the divorce case reprimanded Walters and sentenced him to the Delaware county jail "until completely sober." His wife, Mrs. Alice Walters, was granted a divorce immediately.

EXPECTED TO OPEN JUNE 1

County Home Farm Probable Site; Drainage, Erosion Work Planned.

A civilian conservation corps drainage camp will be established in Marion county about June 1, C. L. Parish of Lima, western Ohio area manager of the soil conservation service, announced here today.

Enrollment of the camp is expected to be in the neighborhood of 200 workers, who will be employed on rehabilitation of existing public drainage facilities. The work will be confined to an area approximately within a 15-mile radius of Marion.

Location of the camp probably will be selected within the next several weeks. Tentative plans call for its establishment on a 10-acre plot of the 230-acre county home farm, east of Marion on state route 95.

Announcement of the intention of establishing the CCC unit here brought to a climax efforts inaugurated three months ago by the Township Trustees and Clerks Association of Marion county. The group was instrumental in promoting the proposal by contacting county and state officials and obtaining signatures of 430 Marion county landowners interested in the program.

No New Projects

No new drainage projects will be undertaken by the unit, Mr. Parish reported. The drainage work is restricted to renovation and maintenance of present public drains, particularly in areas where there is valuable agricultural land. The camp also will do erosion control work.

Drainage and soil conservation, Mr. Parish pointed out, go hand in hand because deterioration of drainage facilities is caused chiefly by silting. Proper land use practices, such as contour cultivation, strip cropping, cover crops, balanced rotation and improved pastures, help assure long life to properly renovated drainage facilities, he said.

Mr. Parish talked today with county officials relative to the establishment of the camp here. He conferred with county commissioners, Carl H. Tozzer, county engineer, and Homer S. Porteus, county agricultural agent. Representatives of the new camp will be located here in the near future and may be contacted through any of these offices, Mr. Parish said.

The length of time the camp will be maintained here is not definite. Duration of its operation depends on such factors as appropriation of federal funds to carry on the work and the amount of work to be done in the county. It is expected, however, that under normal conditions the camp may remain in operation as long as two years.

To View Camp Site

Officials of the CCC will view the proposed camp site before a definite selection is made. Following that it will be necessary to erect barracks to house enrollees. Personnel for erecting and operating the camp will be guided by a small technical staff.

A study of the "needs and desires" of landowners was conducted by the Township Trustees and Clerk Association at the time efforts were started to bring a camp here. Representatives of the county's 15 townships "sounded out" the opinions of landowners and obtained an expression of willingness to cooperate.

The committee in charge of the preliminary steps was headed by Clyde Hinamon, president of the association. It included Fred Baldinger, Foster Davidson, O. L. Johnston and R. O. Carey. Petitions signed by landowners were obtained by the group and W. H. McElhaney, assistant to County Engineer Tozzer, presented them to CCC officials at Lima.

Other Units Closed

Coming simultaneously with the announcement was a report from Washington today that five Ohio CCC units will be closed permanently. Three others in the state are being discontinued for seasonal reasons. In addition to the Marion camp, others are to be established at Wayne national forest at Pedro, soil conservation units at Mansfield and Hillsboro.

The five state camps being closed are among 273 in United States ordered discontinued March 31, under a plan to reduce the

The lunar transits affecting the affairs of this day are rather conflicting. While there is sign of an expansive and benefic influence in things generally, there also are deep sources of deception and trickery to be handled with vigilance, sagacity and a wise, judicial state of mind. friends in high places may be called on for advice and more substantial co-operation.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a particularly pleasant and progressive year in their domestic, social and affectional life, with much of a congenial and festive nature transpiring. But in business there are rather adverse prospects, with intrigue, treachery and sinister undercurrents with which to cope. However, resort to friendship, good fellowship and the wise counsel of those in power and prestige may be influential in routing adverse situations.

SENATE HEADS INTO HATCH BILL DEBATE

Hot Fight Looms on Act To Control Politics.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 12—The senate headed into a long, new discussion of anti-politics legislation today after supporters predicted that only a full-fledged filibuster could kill it.

The legislation, sponsored by Senator Hatch (D-NM), would broaden the Hatch law by placing state employes paid partly from federal funds under present restrictions against political activity by federal workers

Although opponents joined forces yesterday with many farm state senators to try to displace it with the $923,000,000 farm appropriation bill, the senate sprang a surprise and voted 47 to 30 to continue the week-long debate.

Republicans voted solidly against shelving the Hatch legislation after Senator Minton (D-Ind), the majority whip, had given them a tongue-lashing for their stand on the measure

"Talk about pure politics" Minton shouted "The Republicans are trying to Hatch-act the Democrats out of Washington. They are playing smart politics, walking up to the line like a bunch of rubber stamps and voting for the Hatch act."

Although supporters of the measure hoped for a vote late today or tomorrow, Minton told reporters that "a vote in the next few days is impossible"

"We will debate it for two weeks if they make us," he said.

Besides the farm measure, the bill continuing the administration's reciprocal trade program for three years is ready for consideration. House-approved appropriations measures will be added to the calendar from day to day

TRAFFIC

thoroughfares"

A more strict enforcement policy and adoption of a "step-up" system of penalties for frequent offenders is viewed as a means of supplying funds as well as increasing safety.

The report recommends for the police department

1 A traffic squad assignment of men to coincide with peak demands, mounted men and cruiser men to be on duty from 7 a. m. to 3 a m Monday through Friday and all day Saturday and Sunday; minimum of six motorcycles

2 Compilation of full and accurate records

3 Stop escorting all funerals. "This is a dedication of public equipment and employes to the conduct of a private business not justified by the conditions of traffic.

Recommendations on traffic tickets:

1 Use of triplicate form ticket, constituting an affidavit and containing a waiver of court rights and provision for pleading guilty. Complete records of disposition to be kept by the court for periodic auditing by the auditor. The city auditor would have charge of the tickets, issuing them by serial numbers and accounting for every one Each officer would be responsible for tickets in his possession

2. Warrants should be issued and served as soon as possible to persons who fail to answer the tickets.

3. That if persons wish to appear in court they may do so by posting bail equal to the minimum fine.

Other recommendations of enforcement include revision of the traffic code to conform as far as possible with model federal codes, adoption of a policy of punishment by the court; judicious use of the power of suspension

The Ohio inspection bureau recently checked fire-fighting facilities here and ordered Alliance placed in a classification which automatically boosted insurance rates an estimated $35,000 City officials believe passing of the fire levy would bring ultimate countermanding of the increased rates

Dr. Joseph Fetterman and Dr George H. BOXER FOUND GUILTY IN DEATH OF CONSUL

Judge Denounces Prisoner After Jury Returns Verdict.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 12 — A judge whose voice broke with anger denounced as "a cheap bum" a 21-year-old Canadian boxer who had just been convicted of first-degree manslaughter in the fatal bludgeoning of Dr Walter R. Engelberg, German consular attache.

The jury, which had heard counsel for Ernest Kehler contend he beat Dr. Engelberg to death Dec 5 after the latter made immoral advances in his Brooklyn home, reached its verdict last night in six hours and 14 minutes

The boxer, who was caught in Toronto two weeks after the killing, stood frowning in defiance as County Judge Peter J. Brancato congratulated the jury for its "absolutely fair" verdict and then remarked heatedly:

"But the defendant is a shrewd clever individual and showed it by slipping in his defense of intoxication. He was no more drunk than you or I."

"What in thunder made this man kill? Was it sex? I doubt it He is just a cheap bum, lucky he was not convicted of a higher degree

Kehler, who may receive up to 20 years in prison, surlily refused to tell the court clerk his age and birthplace before he was returned to his cell for sentencing later.

Report Stalin Makes Final Demand

By The Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, March 12—Final Soviet terms for ending the Finnish war were laid down at a conference early today in Moscow, the newspaper Stockholms Tidningen reported.

The paper said Joseph Stalin addressed a "friendly" remark to one of the Finnish delegates, Dr Junu Qusti Paasikivi, saying that had Paasikivi continued to head the Finnish group in pre-war conferences last fall, the war could have been avoided.

Yesterday's optimism that peace would result shaded off into uncertainty today with a feeling that the Russians may have enlarged their demands

Reports of increasing Red army forces in Finland also contributed to nervousness over outcome of the negotiations

Contradicting Reports Heard in Finland

By The Associated Press

HELSINKI, March 12 — Press dispatches differed today on whether the Finnish delegation to Moscow was returning home with Soviet Russia's terms.

The Helsingin Sanomat, newspaper of Eljas Erkko, former foreign minister and present minister to Sweden, said in a Berlin dispatch that the Finnish negotiators were enroute home with the Russian conditions.

The Uusi Suomi, however, carried a Moscow dispatch that the delegation was awaiting instructions from the Finnish government, along with a story under a Kaunas, Lithuania, dateline that the Finns probably would leave Moscow today.

The agrarian newspaper Ilkka, published at Vaasa, Finland, said editorially:

"If peace proposals at this stage mean submission by Finland and slicing up her territory, then nothing else can come into question except continuation of the fight."

Midwest Farm Area Slow In Picking Party Favorites

Still Shopping Around for Personalities and Issues in Presidential Campaign.

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, March 12—The agricultural midwest is shopping around for personalities and issues to fit in the presidential picture.

Compared to four years ago when President Roosevelt and Alf Landon dominated the political scene, Republican sentiment in the farm belt states has centered on no one candidate and Democrats are waiting for the President's third-term enigma to be unraveled.

Except for some general Republican criticism of the AAA farm program and some pot-shots at the reciprocal trade treaty program no particular agricultural issues have been drawn. Only in Iowa and Nebraska have farm problems played much part to date in pre-convention and primary campaign maneuvers.

Missouri is interested in a fight over "Pendergastism"; Kansas has been stirred by a Republican party fight over national convention delegates; Nebraska's April 9 primary will provide the first farm belt test between Republicans Thomas E. Dewey and Arthur H. Vandenberg; Iowa Democrats have yet to call a convention to choose presidential delegates, but the Republicans will meet April 12; Minnesota under a new law will have its primaries in June rather than September; no specific agricultural issues have crystallized in the Dakotas.

Landon Keeps Silent

Republican presidential aspirants and emissaries have beaten a path to the door of Landon's Topeka home but he has given none his nod of approval. Neither has he receded from his stand that he would not be a candidate. Some observers professed to see in his friendliness to Rep. Joseph Martin of Massachusetts a possible indication of his preference.

Landon, William Allen White, noted Kansas editor, and Gov. Payne Ratner have joined in suggesting that the Kansas Republican delegation of 18 be instructed for Senator Arthur Capper, veteran Kansas political figure. This maneuver would give the delegation freedom of choice at Philadelphia. Landon is slated to head the group which will be completed at the state convention April 4.

The Kansas delegate fight drew national attention two weeks ago when the United States senate elections committee said it had received a complaint that state administration pressure was being used to indicate delegate choices. Ratner denied any pressure was being used. Senator Clyde M. Reed of Kansas, a Republican who is not of the Landon-Ratner faction, is a member of the elections committee and an avowed candidate for a place on the delegation.

Kansas Democrats are slated to choose a delegation June 15 pledged to Secretary Woodring on the first ballot—provided, of course, Roosevelt is not a candidate.

Stark Backs Roosevelt

In Missouri Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, who took a leading part in the fight against Kansas City's Pendergast machine, has asked an uninstructed Democratic delegation "friendly to Roosevelt," Democratic Senator Harry S. Truman, whom Stark is attempting to unseat, surprised those following his close New Deal votes by opposing a third term for Roosevelt. Truman said, however, he would support Roosevelt if he were nominated. He has urged the 30-vote delegation be instructed for Senator Bennett Champ Clark. The delegation will be chosen April 15 at St. Louis.

Missouri Republicans are talking of an uninstructed delegation to be chosen in district conventions and at a state convention April 26.

Neither Kansas or Missouri will have primaries until Aug. 6.

Nebraska's 14-member Republican delegation will be pledged to the winner of the April primary. President Roosevelt is unopposed on the Democratic ballot, Vice President Garner having declined to enter the preferential primary. Friends of Garner said he did not want to hurt Senator Edward R. Burke's chances of renomination.

A farm issue was raised in Nebraska by Gov. R. L. Cochran, Burke's Democratic primary opponent who charged that the senator had failed to support the administration's farm program. Burke denied opposing any Roosevelt farm measures and said his only reservation was to a permanent program based on compulsory crop control. In the Republican senatorial race both Adam McMullen and Arthur J. Weaver, former governors, pronounced some features of the farm program acceptable but said the program as a whole should be improved.

Minnesota Likes Wheeler

Minnesota's Republican and Democratic leaders generally favor uninstructed delegations. Republicans will name their 22 delegates by May 23. Democrats haven't yet called their convention. In Democratic ranks there is some sentiment for a slate indorsed for President Roosevelt as first choice and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, as second. There will be three parties in the field at the June primaries — Democrat, Republican and Farmer-Labor — to chose nominees for a full state ticket, nine congress seats and the senate seat held by Senator Henrik Shipstead, Farm-Laborite.

Iowa's parties will nominate state and congressional tickets June 3. No senate seat is at stake.

Iowa Democratic leaders, including Senator Clyde L. Herring and State Chairman E. H. Birmingham, have expressed favor for a third term an exception is Senator Guy M. Gillette, who had some New Deal opposition in the 1938 Democratic primary. He said he would not favor a third term even for his father, but added that he had never yet failed to support party nominees. The Democrats have not summoned the convention to name their 22 delegates. There has been some talk of a first ballot complimentary vote for Secretary Wallace or Herring.

Republican delegate activity in Iowa is confined generally to a fight on National Committeeman Harrison Spangler. In presidential discussions Dewey's name figures more prominently than others. The Republican convention has not yet been called.

Low Prices Boon To G.O.P.

Iowa politicians generally agree that a big corn crop and lower prices would react to benefit the G.O.P. as in 1938. A New Deal drive for the farm vote was touched off, however, at the Jackson Day dinner where the AAA anniversary dinner idea was started.

No specific agricultural issues have crystallized in the Dakotas.

Democratic Governor John Moses of North Dakota favors the present farm program; Republican Congressman William Lemke opposed the soil conservation program and wants a cost-of-production-plus program. Various groups have opposed the reciprocal trade treaties but over North Dakota sources have preached "short sightedness" of those opposing the treaty program.

Although it is too early to predict the wheat crop in Kansas—the big wheat state—prospects are poor due to a fall drouth. Many farmers, however, have cushioned the blow in advance through the federal crop insurance program. The ultimate effect of the farm program thus is a matter of speculation.

Leap Before You Look

By Peggy O'More

YESTERDAY: Tomi makes a hit with Allen's friends. Allen seems disappointed when Tomi chooses Pierre as her escort, rather than himself. Pierre is courteous and attentive, yet Tomi continues to be very much aware of Allen.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Eternal Warfare

TOMI sighed and hoped she was going to be Pierre's employer. Perhaps she would have a chance to talk to Allen before Pierre demanded a decision.

"Then Monday?" she asked. "I'll telephone the hotel Monday afternoon?"

Pierre thought that would be an excellent time. The cab bounced over the rough roads and Tomi was delivered to the door of her home with no more than a courteous good night.

"I wish Allen, with his foolish fears, could have seen that," she thought, going to her room to stand at the window and look into the shadows.

A light flashed in the shadows, a match held to a cigarette and revealing a familiar profile. Allen had seen.

"Spying on me," flashed Tomi, and yet she felt secretly pleased. It had been a lovely evening; a lovely day. She recalled each incident.

Huddled in the pillows, arms wrapped about her knees, Tomi sat, thinking. Had Allen really taken Pierre seriously? Did he think Pierre the "man who will handle her as she needs to be handled."

Perhaps he feared Pierre's intelligence and knew he'd have less chance of winning the estate if she had the man from Louisiana to help with the farm.

Yet, when Tomi slept, she didn't dream of Pierre, but of an eternal warfare with Bartell; a warfare in which each of them, armed with belaying pins, sought to make the other "sit up and beg."

Tomi spent most of the following day outlining the plan she would lay before Bartell. With the assistance of Abe, she drew up a prospective budget for the next six months, and then sent Abe to look for Bartell and make an appointment for Monday morning.

Allen had not slept at his cottage and Abe started for Alameda, Tomi retired to her room to watch the fog roll in through the Golden Gate in a black cloud. It was utterly dreary.

The clock tolled five and Tomi thought of the old Toland house. Back there, two thousand miles away, the Tolands were having tea. Sunday tea was a ritual. All members of the family not living under the Toland roof were called to balance cups of the anemic beverage and exclaim over thin slices of dry pound cake.

To think that only two weeks ago, she had been there, slipping the cake to the greedy Ming Toy, and being roundly scolded by Great-aunt Hannah when she was caught.

She hadn't had a worry in the world. A good position, a dream of a tiny, efficient apartment and only herself to think about. Now she had Old Abe, a house, a million frogs and a Louisiana Frenchman to balance against one Allen Bartell.

Realization that two hours difference in time lay between Alameda and Chicago made her feel considerably better. Perhaps the morning mail would bring word from Great-aunt Hannah.

Twilight and Abe arrived together, both dark with gloom.

"Didn't find Allen," Abe reported. "Him and Lily went to Berkeley this morning. Ain't been seen since. I told his ma about you bein' anxious to get a date with him—"

"Oh, Abe," wailed Tomi, "not a date; a business appointment."

"Same thing," insisted Abe. "His ma looked at the book he keeps and said to see him at his office at one-thirty. Said he'd be in court in the morning. She sent you half a coconut cream cake. Said she'd be over to see you soon's you had a chance to settle. She sure is a swell lady."

Businesslike

The cake cheered Tomi a little, or rather the friendly gesture of the woman who had sent it. Nevertheless, she started for her appointment the following day with considerable apprehension.

She had dressed with even more care than she had used for the dinner dance. She wanted to look crisp, efficient, businesslike. She chose a black suit, white tailored blouse, black Breton sailor, and white accessories.

The ensemble seemed an insult to the day. High white clouds rolled along the horizon. White sails swelled above the blue waters, gay, adventuresome. Even the ships lifting from the nearby airports dipped and circled like sky dolphins in an azure sea.

Tomi's spirits neither rolled, swelled nor circled.

Promptly at one-thirty she was admitted to Allen Bartell's private office, but as soon as she was seated, retired to his chair.

Tomi wondered what there was about a business desk which gave its possessor the advantage of a man holding a fort. It made the person on the other side assume the role of an aggressor.

"Mr. Bartell—" Tomi set the atmosphere of the interview with her businesslike tone—"I want to come to a definite understanding about my finances."

"Yes?"

Bartell wasn't going to be helpful.

"I've outlined a possible budget. I'm allowing six hundred dollars per month for maintenance of the house and farm. I assume there is approximately seventy-five hundred dollars left in the account."

"Eight thousand five hundred and seventy-five dollars and fifty-seven cents," corrected Bartell gravely.

"Deducting Abe's teeth and the car," amended Tomi, "there should be seven thousand six hundred and seventy dollars and ninety-five cents."

"Did it cost that much to have Abe's teeth deducted?" inquired Bartell, brightly.

"And replaced," Tomi added, and wondered suddenly why he hadn't deducted the cost of the car. Was he intending to make that part of the estate so it would be returned to him when he won? Never!

"Allowing this maintenance, there will be nearly five thousand dollars left; I want to have some improvements made on the house."

"For instance?"

"A telephone installed so my customers can reach me in an emergency?"

"Did I hear you say customers?"

"You did," snapped Tomi. "Oh, I know what you think. The farm is run down. Abe would faint if a real order came in. But I'm going to change things. I'm going to bring customers in if I have to haul them by the scruff of the neck."

"You won't need a telephone if you bring them in that way."

Tomi sat, rigid with wrath. "Are you ready to consider the next item?"

"At your service."

"I want the house wired for electricity."

Bartell straightened. "Have you any idea what it will cost to have a power line brought in from the highway?"

"Have you?" flashed Tomi.

"I have. I considered it when the cottage was built. Until the farm is established in your name, permanently, I would not advise going to that expense."

Method of Payment

"So you don't think I'll last," Tomi flared. "Well, I'm going to. And you'd like to see me toting kerosene lamps around for five whole years, wouldn't you? Maybe you'd like to see me break my neck on that long, dark stairway?"

"It would save me the trouble of breaking it," Bartell returned pleasantly.

Tomi wondered, helplessly, if murderesses were hung or electrocuted in California. If she didn't control her temper she'd go homicidal.

"I'll remember that statement," she warned.

"Better put it in writing," advised the man, gray eyes dancing with golden lights. "It won't hurt me—afterwards. Now, shall we look over the budget and see where it can be slashed?"

Tomi swallowed and laid the papers on his desk. He studied them, then frowned as he came to one item.

"Salaries — three hundred and fifty?" he questioned. "Are you paying yourself a salary?"

Tomi braced herself for what was to come. "No," she managed.

"Allowing one hundred for Abe," he mused. "But you won't have to pay a housekeeper two hundred and fifty," he added.

"Housekeeper?" gasp Tomi.

"Certainly. You can't live there alone. I mean you can't take care of the house and handle the business end of the project at the same time."

"Why didn't you say what you meant?" Tomi asked. "You want someone to spy on me to save you the trouble. Given skirts and a rat-filled pompadour, you'd make a second Great-aunt Hannah."

"I'm just beginning to appreciate your Great-aunt," Bartell retorted. "However, the housekeeper is a must-have. Timothy put that into writing. You are to choose her, so you won't have to worry about her spying on you. Now, if this salary isn't for this woman, for whom is it intended?"

"An expert in ranaculture."

"And I suppose this expert has been chosen?"

"Yes, he is Pierre Prudhomme."

Tomi relaxed as Bartell smiled. It was such a delightful, cheery smile. "Why don't you pay the lad what he's worth?" he asked.

Tomi accepted his words at sound value. "Oh, then you do approve? And what would you suggest doing about his salary?"

"I'd pay him off with a swift kick which would land him right in the center of Canal Street. That's in New Orleans, if you don't know its location."

Bartell arose to demonstrate Prudhomme's payment.

Tomi arose with him.

"It's useless to talk to you, Mr. Bartell. I'll assume you will meet the obligations of the farm. As for Mr. Prudhomme's salary, I'll take care of that. I saved a little money while I was working. I don't know of a better way to apply it than to make it work for the farm."

"Wait a minute." Bartell was around the desk and had stopped Tomi's departure. "I'm not going to let that—that—"

"Fraternity brother?" offered Tomi sweetly.

"All right—fraternity brother—be indebtedly to you personally. I'll take care of his salary out of the fund. I'll admit he does know frogs."

"And why the admission?"

Bartell flushed. "I had him investigated," he confessed. "Went over to the fraternity house Sunday and we long-distanced Tulane."

Tomi's eyes widened with interest. "And what did you learn, if you don't mind my being forewarned."

Fever

I have been asked to discuss the old saying, "Feed a cold and starve a fever."

The saying has practically no meaning because a cold is a fever. It probably originated far back in the dim mists of time when the doctrine of humours held the field and heat was supposed to be opposed to cold, dryness to moisture. Disease was supposed to be a disturbance of the balance of these qualities.

Fever was an abundance of heat, and could be reduced by lack of nourishment. The great Dublin doctor of the early nineteenth century, Robert Graves, spent a great deal of his time breaking up the idea of starving a fever and requested that there be inscribed on his tombstone the words, "He fed fevers."

Looking at the whole subject from an enlightened view of the nature of disease, we would say that any infection is inclined to depress the digestive functions at the beginning of its course. The thought of food is repulsive. It is a pretty good fellow to follow the instincts of nature in these respects and to follow along with the patient's symptoms. It does no harm, therefore, for most patients to go on a light diet or even starvation for the first few days of fever.

"Friendly Enemies" in the Air

French and German Planes Fly Side by Side in South America.

By DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Aviation Editor

NEW YORK, March 12 —Of all the anomalies in Europe's war on the western front, none is stranger than the elaborate indifference with which French and German transport planes fly side by side in South America.

So far as French and German pilots down there are concerned, the war abroad does not exist.

Moreover, in spite of the close political collaboration between Germany and Italy in Europe, the Italians eschew cooperation with the German airline in South America in favor of the French.

Airlines of the two countries share weather, radio and other facilities to the exclusion of Lufthansa, the German airline.

For more than 3,000 miles down the coast of Brazil from Rio De Janeiro, through Uruguay to Buenos Aires and across the Andes to Santiago, airliners of Germany and France have been flying their schedules regularly.

The Buenos Aires-Santiago leg of the German route now has been discontinued, but Lufthansa expects to resume service as soon as some larger, faster German-made planes are received. The British blockade has made the date indefinite.

The Germans abandoned one of their commercial airline operations in this hemisphere when the war started—the south Atlantic airmail service, a fixture for several years They quit because the only feasible takeoff points on the African west coast, Bathurst and Dakar, are controlled by the Allies.

Lately an Italian line has replaced the German on the south Atlantic run, flying by way of the Cape Verde islands.

Indicative of increasing competition in South America among the foreign-owned airlines of both belligerents and non-belligerents are new and faster planes being introduced, Air France, the French operating company, recently dispatched a new Farman 4-motor monoplane across the south Atlantic to speed its communication with its south American continental service.

Lufthansa is awaiting the arrival of four-motor Focke wulfe transports to replace the tri-motor Junkers which have been in use for several years.

Pan American Airways soon will groom a new 250-mile-an-hour land-plane for service in South America.

Peace in Finland Blow to Allies, Boost for Hitler

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The Anglo-French brotherhood will have missed the boat de luxe in most disconcerting fashion if the Finns succumb to Bolshevist pressure and accept the Red peace terms which they have fought so hard and so long to escape.

That is to say, the moment the Finns sign a treaty the allies will have suffered a major defeat in their war with Germany.

There is no other way to describe their failure (or call it inability) to intervene by force on the side of Finland, thereby establishing a new war theatre from which to stroke at both Russia and Germany.

It will represent at triumph for Hitler. He will have outsmarted his enemy in a big way, for he is the one who sent the Russians and Finns into a conference calculated to end their war and thus save him from grave danger.

Ex-Minister Urges Action

Intervention presented a grand strategic opportunity, as the allies' own experts have kept telling them. One strong advocate has been Leslie Hore-Belisha, British war minister who lost his cabinet position recently for reasons never made public.

This admittedly brilliant ex-official recently advised:

"The risk of helping Finland may be great, but the risk of not helping her may be greater. Well planned, decisive action in Finland would give new strength to the allies' economic arm and curtail the duration of the war."

But the British government moves with great deliberation. It is conservative by name, and conservative by nature.

Throughout the bloody months during which the Finns have defended their birthright is one of the finest, gamest military campaigns of history, they have repeatedly appealed for assistance.

The tiny Finnish army has lugged about on its back the elephantine weight of the Bolshevist invader until the defenders weakened under the burden of sheer bulk.

1939 Police Report Lists 1,561 Arrests, Highest in City's Histo

$23,745 Worth of Stolen Property Recovered; F for Criminal Investigations Asked.

Arrests reached an all-time high in Marion during 1939, with 1,561 men, women and children taken into custody, the annual police department report released today shows. In 1938 there were 1,501 arrests, 60 less than last year.

Other phases of the police department's activities showed a slightly lower volume during 1939 than in 1938, however. Last year officers answered 3,421 police calls as compared to 4,947 in 1938. A total of 5,654 complaints were received during the year as compared to 7,070 during the previous year.

Traffic tags issued during the year totaled 1,917 including 1,000 "courtesy" tags which served as warnings but did not require the motorists' appearance in court. In 1938 there were 1,961 tags issued, all of the regulation type.

Property Recovered

The report also shows that last year police recovered $23,745.15 in stolen property, including 47 automobiles valued at $20,070; sixty-seven bicycles valued at $1,227 and other property listed at $2,448.15. This compared to the following figures for 1938: total property recovered, $19,128.21; 50 autos recovered, $16,000; 49 bicycles recovered, $1,026; other property recovered, $2,102.21.

In 1939 39 cars and 88 bicycles were reported stolen in the city as compared to 44 cars and 78 bicycles in 1938.

In the report, which is addressed to Mayor Snare, Safety-Service Director Caldwell and members of council, Police Chief Marks makes five recommendations for the improvement of the police department. They are:

1. Establishment of a fund for criminal investigation so that the department may investigate several types of cases more thoroughly. While no specific types were mentioned in the recommendation police have pointed out on several occasions in recent years that a lack of funds for investigations is a handicap in enforcement of liquor and gambling law violations. No funds are now provided for the purpose.

2. Repeal of the present city ordinance which permits card playing in public places an enactment of the ban in eff til a few years ago.

3. Addition of one more to supplement the two the ment now operates. This has been discussed by for several months as a strengthening the city po dio set-up.

4. Chief Marks also recom that the city ordinance co ing disorderly conduct be vised and brought up to m standards."

5. Repair or replacement lice telephone booths at depot drive and the cor Center and Davids street.

21 Demands

FAINTLY suggestive of Japan's 21 demands on China in 1915 in breadth of the territory they cover are the 21 proposals in the preliminary report of the house committee investigating national labor relations board affairs.

Their scope is indicated by the fact they cover almost every controversial point of the board's conduct, propose changes in the board's composition and even a re-wording of the preamble of the labor relations act.

As submitted, the proposals bear the approval of the committee chairman and two committee members. The other two members, while approving some of the proposals, refused to indorse the whole list.

The division illustrates the fundamental flaw in the labor relations act, which is the sharp division of opinion over what it is intended to accomplish. Congress, itself, is none too sure.

The same things that are objectionable to one school of opinion are the things the opposing school finds admirable. The law prescribes for a national policy which cannot be shown to represent popular opinion. It is not, therefore, a good law, whatever its friends may say in its behalf.

Even within the ranks of unionized labor there is difference of opinion on the act's provisions. While the labor board is blamed for much of what has been done under the act that has been criticized, it is the belief of the act's outright defenders that those self-same things should have been done.

To the charge that the act is class legislation intended to favor a particular group at the expense of other groups they reply that they believe in it for that very reason. That will be their retort to the committee's 21 proposals for change, no doubt. But at least some of the discussion that should have preceded so violent a departure from traditional procedures is made possible by the committee's investigation and preliminary report—and that is a net gain.

Kindly Take Note

REBUTTAL for a favorite argument—that no matter who wins the war, democracy loses—is the presence in the United States of Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to a throne in a country that doesn't exist—Austria.

Otto is looking ahead to Danubian federation as soon as the would-be masters of central Europe have exhausted themselves again. Counting on the probable value of his person as a symbol of government when and if the time comes, he declares he has come here to study representative democracy.

There may be more to his visit than that, of course, but the significance of a pretender to a throne preparing himself for the job by studying the government of the United States can't be shrugged off. At the very least, it means that one European politician anticipates more, not less, attention to the individual as the result of a war precipitated in large part of submersion of the individual in an authoritarian state.

Reviewing the Situation

LETTING go of a bear's tail is no easier than meeting him halfway, which was the purpose of the negotiations between Finland and Russia last fall. When diplomacy failed, war started.

Russia's stated objective in the negotiations was to secure the safety of Leningrad, giving rise to the supposition that Germany was the country most feared. Leningrad is vulnerable to naval attack only from the country that controls the Baltic—Germany.

In return for the privilege of fortifying the approach to Leningrad and making the Gulf of Finland a naval stronghold, Russia is believed to have promised Finland territory on the Karelian border and guarantees of no interference. Fortifications on both sides of the border were to be abolished. There was to be a non-aggression pact also.

Finland is understood to have refused because, as the weaker power, it was unwilling to abandon its defenses and because surrender of territory to the extent demanded by Russia would entail a surrender of sovereignty it could not make as an independent nation. Finland had no reason to trust Russia.

Its reply to Finland's refusal to be accommodating was invasion, met by fierce Finnish resistance. The Finns had failed to meet a bear halfway, according to the bear's standards, and were therefore obliged to grab the bear by the tail. It now is confronted with the problem of how to let go.

News Behind the News

Garner's Conversations with Friends Indicate What He'd Do as President.

By PAUL MALLON

JOHN N. GARNER

"What kind of president would he make?" Following is the fourth of a collection of inside Washington news and views on candidates, measured in the scales of personal opinion, in an effort to contribute factual thought to that puzzler now occupying the country on the eve of the primary campaign.

WASHINGTON, March 12—John Garner's personal conversations with his colleagues around the senate have established more definitely than the public yet knows what kind of a president he proposes to be.

His position has kept him from submitting a platform. As vice president he cannot very well undertake to take the stump against certain New Deal policies or offer his remedies. He has fully respected the requirements of his office in developing his campaign. Not a word of public comment on the issues of the day have escaped his lips in seven years.

But he has energetically tried on the inside to alter the course of some New Deal policies, always to the President's face. News of his self-effacing and courageous stands was bound to leak out of the party council. Indeed the campaign for him was started because the country understood through the press the general outlines of the positions he has taken which found favor in many minds. But among his party associates and closest friends there exists a more detailed and emphatic understanding of what he would like to do, which can here now be set forth with some assurance.

Wants Budget Balanced

Garner would devote himself first to three major corrections of policy—on fiscal affairs, unemployment, and farm relief.

The vice president knows the budget can not be balanced overnight. Nor does he follow the glib contention that a painful balancing would automatically restore prosperity. But he seems to have more determination and courage to tackle the problem, regardless of political results, than most of the other candidates. For one thing he would favor giving the White House authority for an item veto of appropriation bills, whereby he would take full responsibility for cutting down. First thing needed to balance the budget in his mind is to have a president who wants to balance it, and he certainly wants to. Only other thing needed is to keep a politically minded congress from thwarting the president's desires.

His 37 years' experience in congress have centered mainly in fiscal affairs and he undoubtedly is better equipped to carry out his determination than anyone else in the race in either party.

Unemployment

Garner would unquestionably try to cure a multitude of unemployment sins by administrative changes, without material alteration of basic law. His theory on this seems to be the same as on the national labor relations board, securities exchange commission, social security, and many other new government setups. These all represent absorption of power in too-ambitious executive hands. If some of them were handed back to the courts, others to the states, and others to congress, the decentralization of authority would automatically cure many of the existing evils now surrounding them.

Employment would be aided by sheer stabilization of governmental action. Business would be given a clear statement of what it could expect from government and upon which it could depend.

Farm Relief

Correctives on farm relief, last of the major Garner trio, would undoubtedly be assigned to satisfactory experts on the problem. But Garner's criticism of existing farm policies has been caustic and rather complete. He certainly would not continue to "let crops spoil and be eaten up by weevils" in home farm bins unequipped for storage.

National Defense

On national defense he is nearly as strong an advocate of a big navy as Mr. Roosevelt. But he would have no peace plans for a new world order, although he has been devoting two or three hours nightly reading on the subject lately. The issue of our involvement in the war has already been settled by the people in his opinion, and that fully satisfies him.

For a cabinet, he would run the scale of political emotions, from a type of liberal like Mayor La Guardia of New York, to a type of intellectual conservative like Representative Jimmy Wadsworth of New York. (These names are mentioned, only for illustration as Mr. Garner himself once used them in this way in a conversation with a senator.) The only other requirement he would insist upon from cabinet officers is that they tell him the truth.

Courage

All of this makes it even more apparent than it has always been that the efforts to classify Garner as a conservative are merely political arguments for a political purpose. He is the only man in the Roosevelt government who has had the courage to stand up continuously for what he believes, even if it entailed an agrument with the boss. He alone also refused to flee in the face of third term rumors. Consequently, he has aroused the antagonism of the leftist groups within the administration, and they have been circulating rather vicious personal attacks upon him because they feared him. (John Lewis' characterization of Garner as a "poker playing, whisky drinking, labor baiting, evil old man" was the worst of the unintended compliments from this school of thought.) The reward of courage in politics is abuse.

But Garner was a liberal when

U. S. Treasure Hunt

Scientists on Trail of Materials Used in War Weapons.

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON, March 12. — Uncle Sam is conducting a treasure hunt—the most thorough in the country's history.

It's a scientific search for seven minerals essential in the making of war weapons. They are: manganese, tin, nickel, chromium, tungsten, antimony and mercury.

The Army and Navy Munitions Board lists all seven as "strategic minerals"—that is, if this country went to war, all would have to be obtained, in whole or in part, from sources outside the United States.

A four year investigation of ore deposits is being made by experts of the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines. Ore samples are being analyzed in government laboratories, and the Bureau of Mines is doing research on metalurgical methods.

Preston Grover

There have been no startling discoveries since the work got under way last fall. However, Bureau of Mines engineers say there is hope that potential resources of three metals — chromium, tungsten and antimony— will be found adequate for wartime needs. The outlook isn't so bright, however, for manganese or tin. Most of the excavation work thus far has been in the west and southwest.

What We Have—And Haven't

Here's the situation on the seven sought-for metals:

Manganese — Probably the most critical mineral deficiency. Little U. S. ore is of a type suitable for making ferro-manganese, the alloy used in steel manufacture. Needed for airplanes, other weapons and precision machinery. Chief hope is future development of methods to improve the considerable quantity of low grade manganese ores.

Tin—Second most serious mineral shortage problem. Domestic production less than 1-10 of 1 per cent of consumption. Some native undeveloped resources. Most of our supply comes from Asia. Used in gun metals, solders, bearings, and for protective coating on steel "tin" cans.

Nickel — Hardly any domestic resources but Canada has about 90 per cent of world supply. Essential in toughening steel and manfacture of armour plate. Nickel steel used in large caliber rifles, marine shafting, autos and bridge construction.

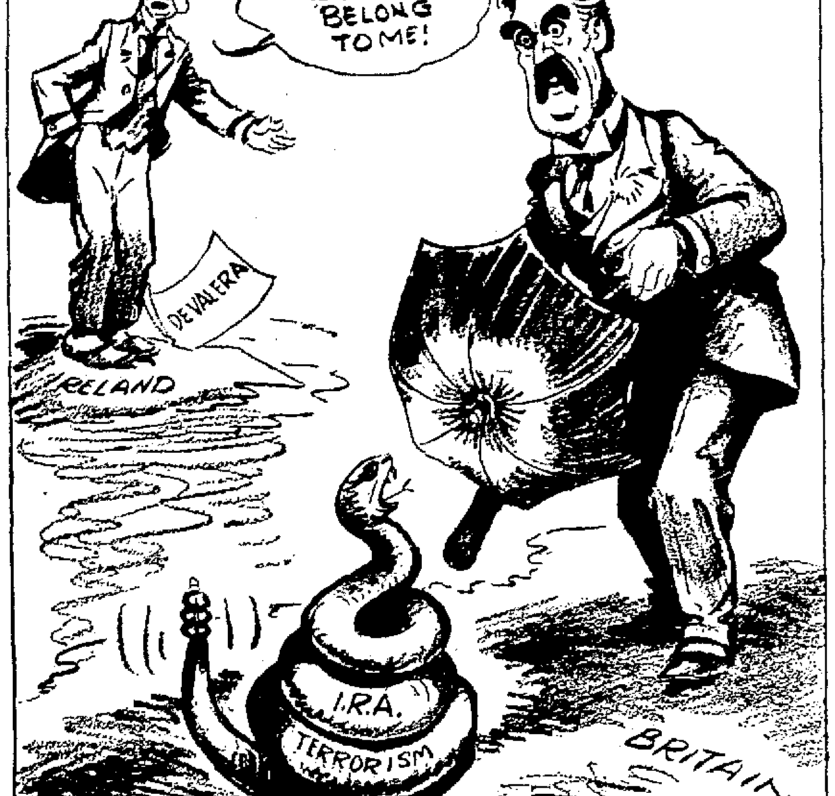
Chromium — Current production insignificant but considerable undeveloped chromite ore which could be used in emergency, provided methods are worked out in advance. Essential for rust-resistant steels. Used in armor plate, projectiles, high-speed cutting tools.

Tungsten — Domestic production, about half of nation's consumption, could be stepped up in an emergency. Ores widespread in U. S., but commercial production confined to 11 western states. Essential in certain tool steels and incandescent lamps. Our biggest imports from China and British Malaya.

Antimony — Most of our supplies come from a Texas smelter which treats Mexican ores. U. S. resources in this country very limited, but proximity to Mexico helps our strategic position. Used in bullets and shrapnel, and alloyed with lead for storage batteries.

Mercury—U. S. imports about half of its required supplies. Self-sufficiency might be attained for a brief emergency period under stimulation of high prices. Used for detonating high explosives and for many industrial activities. Several substitutes, but for military use mercury is considered safest and most reliable.

ONE ST. PATRICK OVERLOOKED



The Welles Trip

Evidence That U. S. Government Lacks Answers on War.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, March 12—If Mr. Welles' journey to Europe should develop any hope for peace in the near future, the men who sent him over there would be the most surprised people in the world.

For, as the trip develops, it is becoming more and more apparent that most any basis for peace agreeable to Germany would also mean that the Allies, by the same token, would lose the war.

Morgan Beatty

The reasons are these:

1. The Allies succeeded last fall in mobilizing their military and economic man power without losing a man.

2. That mobilization itself was the first real "victory" of the war, and you could have knocked over the German high command with a feather when they saw it completed, without internal trouble in France or Britain.

3. Any peace short of complete submission of Germany would mean the demobilization of the Allied economic and military machinery WITHOUT gaining the objectves required by their declaration of war.

4. It follows that President Roosevelt, admittedly sympathetic with the Allied cause, would not press for a peace that would embarrass the Allies by forcing them to turn down the plan and thereby take upon themselves the responsibility of deliberate continuance of the war.

5. It also follows that any peace plan acceptable to Germany would at least recognize part of the aggressions of the nazis in Czechoslovakia and Poland, and, to that extent, place the benediction of the United States on the doctrine that might makes right. That is exactly opposite to the sermons President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have been preaching for three years.

Answers Wanted

Mr. Welles' trip to Europe, therefore, must mean that President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull, and the American government in general don't have any of the answers on the war. Their information from abroad must be conflicting, sparse, and obviously erroneous in many respects.

It also means that the Roosevelt administration does not want to go into a critical campaign year and a critical period in history without doing its utmost to try to make some sense out of the European struggle from the American point of view.

Mr. Welles is without question the sharpest diplomatic tack in the state department. In the past he has often been able to find out the answers to tough questions, more by what other people didn't say, or do, than by what they did say, or did do.

It is possible he may be able to get more out of what Hitler, Chamberlain, Daladier, and their satellites don't tell him, than by what they do.

Political Angle

Maybe Mr. Roosevelt will find out from Mr. Welles how serious the clash on the other side of the water this spring will be:

(1.) Whether there may be a world holocaust, and a public demand for a third term.

Or (2.) whether the war will wallow along in its economic trough, and Americans will turn entirely to domestic affairs.

Or may be Mr. Welles won't be able to figure out the answers.

Either way, Messrs. Roosevelt and Hull will be able to tell themselves that they have done everything they can to help guide the course of the American ship of state in critical times — and incidentally, to steer the course of the Democratic party.

For Mr. Welles' trip is building up for the President the political answer to a political cry—"he is leading us toward war." In naming Myron Taylor as personal ambassador to the Vatican, and in sending Mr. Welles to Europe, Mr. Roosevelt is incidentally making it possible for his supporters to chirp in reply: "No; he tried to lead the world toward peace."

They Say Roosevelt Looks Ol —but Why Shouldn't He?

By DAMON RUNYON

ACCORDING to Washington corresp President Roosevelt appears olde when he took office seven years ago at of 51. They say his hair is thinner and that lines of fatigue show in his count and that he is not as good natured.

The correspondents speak of these changes as the toll exacted of Mr. Roose his job, though if you ask us the seven years beyond 50 are to blame. It is our belief that had Mr. Roosevelt been working with a pick and shovel the past seven years or even at pounding out newspapers copy, he would show the same marks of wear and tear.

Damon

It is difficult for a man to keep from displaying scars of this nature down the back stretch of life between 50 and 60, unless he is a horse player or an old faro bank dealer. As we have said before in this column, old faro bank dealers never die, just evaporate. The late Wilson Mizn had a standing offer of $500 for proof death of an old faro bank dealer. It wa claimed.

Horse players die, but not until they a great age. Normal physical stamina horse player alive up to 70, then he least 10 years more on hope. It is a well fact that hope is a potent factor in su life. The horse player's hope is that not die broke. He finally relinquishes e at around 80.

THE YEARS between 50 and 60 are th years on a man, physically and m It is in those years that he has to reconci self to the appearance of having inhaled flated basketball, and to getting on manipulation of his upper plate. That is tough eno he also becomes aware that older ladie his companionship with no trepidation, even tougher. It is then a man really thinking of hanging up his gloves.

Mr. Roosevelt would be a phenomen he stood for seven years without chang appearance, even if he had not been P Some of those Washington corresponde write about the alteration in his app ought to take a peek in the mirror and s the same length of time has done for the might be surprised.

"I have no intention of writing new bills at this time—there are too many of them already."

The chubby, good-humored contractor, who resigned as house floor leader in the legislature to run for congress, was chosen in a special election Feb. 27 to succeed the late Rep. William A. Ashbrook, Democrat.

Likes Washington

"I am going to like Washington," McGregor observed as he sat in his office contemplating his new environment. "Everyone here makes you feel as one of them from the outset. They even answer tolerantly what to them must be obvious questions from newcomers."

McGregor said he considered government expenditures one of the difficult problems before congress. "Spending must be tapered ultimately," he said, "and I'm glad to hear that an economy bloc apparently is getting somewhere."

"The government needs, too," he smiled, "to cut red tape. But that's not a new problem, and I don't suppose it ever will be possible to solve it."

The new member said one of his first tasks after getting settled down would be to study government costs. Meanwhile, he intends to support every proposal for "reasonable" curtailment.

"As I see it now," he said, "one of the places to start in efforts to balance the budget is in the operation of federal relief agencies."

He suggested that savings could be affected by turning over relief administration to the states with some financial aid from the federal government.

On Three Committees

McGregor has been appointed to membership on three house committees. One is the territories committee of which Rep. Robert F. Jones, Lima Republican, also is a member.

The others are the committees on invalid pensions and on public buildings and grounds. These two customarily handle routine legislation, but the territories committee often receives interesting measures which precipitate warm debate.

Last week, for instance, the house engaged in several hours debate over a bill which Jones and other Republican labeled as intended to put the government in the tourist business.

The bill would authorize a $30,000 appropriation for the purchase of tourist facilities in McKinley national park, Alaska, now handled by a private concern.

Jones, a first termer, wrote the committee's minority report opposing the legislation, and thereby got his first chance to lead one side in the lively floor discussion which followed.

Seasoned legislators said he did a good job.

Informed persons say there is little chance of congress exceeding budget recommendations on flood control. The house refused to increase the $70,000,000 budget figure for fiscal 1941 and several senators said there was no disposition in their branch to change the amount.

Flood control advocates are proposing an increase of at least $25,000,000. The appropriation for the current fiscal year was $133,000,000.

Marion Elks "Harding Class" To Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary

Four members of Marion Lodge No. 32, B. P. O. Elks on Wednesday will celebrate their golden anniversary of membership. Their class of 28 men included President Warren G. Harding, who was the first of the group to be initiated.

The four only surviving members of group, are Edward H. Huggins of 549 Delaware avenue, a past secretary, B. E. Kleinmaier of 458 South State street, a past secretary, Harry O. Scribner of 283 Orchard street and R. R. Bartram of Columbus.

Only three other members of the lodge have longer membership records. They are two charter members, Past Exalted Ruler S. G. Kleinmaier of 434 South State street and A. W. Bryant of 585 Cleveland avenue and Dr. A. Rhu of 545 Bellefontaine avenue, a past exalted ruler and dean of Marion's practicing physicians.

The class was initiated on March 3, 1890. The lodge was organized in 1888.

Whether there will be a reunion of the four surviving members has not been decided. Mr. Bartram, in a letter last week to Mr. Huggins regarding a reunion dinner at the Huggins home, said that because of Mrs. Bartram's health it might be impossible for him to attend. If he cannot come the other three probably will get together for a session of reminiscing, Mr. Huggins said.

Mr. Huggins still has the receipt for lodge dues bearing the March 13, 1890 date, and a ticket to the grand lodge ball held on July 8 of the same year at the "City Armory" in Cleveland.

Also in his possession is a faded leaf from a small memo book, bearing the names of the members of the class and the order of their initiation. Besides President Harding, the other members were J. S. Dudley who was the first mayor after Marion became a city, Dan Richards, Grant Holmes, J. J. Sloan, N. E. Thatcher, C. W. Leffler, R. F. Stoll, W. E. Stoll, George Turner, Eli Bush, J. F. Leffler, W. H. Schaffner, Isadore Jacobs, Will H. Smith, J. M. Brigel, Robert Martin, A. A. Rhoads, Dr. J. A. McMurray, F. E. Howard, J. E. Rhoads, L. H. Flocken, W. J. Hill and Harvey Millisor.

Mr. Huggins' receipt bears the signature of the then secretary of the lodge, the late George M. Belcher who was a member of the undertaking firm of Frame & Belcher on West Center street.

CHILD BURNED WHEN DRESS CATCHES FIRE

Saved from Serious Injury by Mother.

Joan Elizabeth, five and one-half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowman of 562 North Main street, was burned on her back and right arm when her dress caught fire from an open gas stove in the bathroom at her home shortly before noon yesterday. Her hair was slightly singed and the back of her dress and underclothing were burned.

The child had gone to the bathroom to wash preparatory to going down town with her mother, and the latter in the meantime had been called to the door. Her dress was in flames when she ran to her mother, who attempted to beat out the flames with her hand and then rolled her on the floor. Mrs. Bowman suffered severe burns on her left hand.

River Reservoirs Protect Ohio Cities from Flash Flood

By The Associated Press

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., March 12.Flood control reservoirs protected Ohio cities in the Muskingum river basin against extensive damage by checking March 5 "flash" floods, army engineers contend.

Value of the reservoirs in the Muskingum conservancy district was "effectively demonstrated" during the past week, engineers said.

"With only limited control of the 14 dams, river stages that would have been the highest since the January, 1937, flood were held at or below usually accepted flood stages throughont the entire Muskingum basin," asserted Lt. Col. J. D. Arthur Jr., Huntington district engineer.

Although some cities in the district reported streets flooded and secondary roads were inundated, Arthur said damage generally was minor and stream levels "were far below the stages which would have been reached had not the dams been in operation."

The river stage at Zanesville would have been 26 feet, or two feet over its March 5 level and above flood stage, except for reservoir control, Arthur declared.

"The maximum reduction was at Uhrichsville on Stillwater creek," where a stage of 10 feet was reached, a foot below flood level," he said. "The crest would have been approximately 15 feet except for the Clendening and Piedmont dams, a crest exceeded only by the 17.5 feet of the 1913 flood."

Tons of water backed up by the reservoirs are being released as rapidly as channel capacities permit.

Legion at 21 Is Hunting Jobs

Becomes "Of Age" This Week; Urges Employment for Men Over 40.

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, March 12 — The American Legion becomes 21 years old this week and, like a youngster coming of age, is thinking about finding work.

The red-letter birthday, at the organization's national headquarters here, finds it engaged in an employment campaign dedicated to the proposition that life begins at 40.

The Legion has set out to show industry that men of 40—Legionnaires included—still have many useful years ahead and make steadier workers than younger men.

Overseas soldiers organized the Legion in Paris March 15, 16 and 17, 1919. It now has 11,620 posts with about 750,000 members and before the end of the year expects to surpass the 1931 record of 1,050,000.

Birthday Program

Friday, Saturday and Sunday all posts will hold birthday parties.

Saturday night, on a network radio program (NBC blue, 7:30 p. m., eastern standard time), National Commander Raymond J. Kelly of Detroit will speak from Chicago and Mrs. William H. Corwith of Rockville Center, N. Y., president of the Women's Auxiliary, from New York City. Legion history will be dramatized.

Employment is not a new problem with the Legion, but today's approach is new. After the war Legion posts set up employment bureaus.

Now the method is propaganda. Three national committees work under Paul H. Griffith of Washington, D. C., national employment director.

The national convention in Chicago last September voted to spend more to bring about re-employment and vocation training of men over 40, to conduct next May a "national employment week for workers over 40," and to sponsor conferences on the problem.

What the Legion has to sell to industry—the average Legionnaire of today—is a man 47 with a wife and two children.

Legion employment officers cite a study made by the National Association of Manufacturers as proof that such a man is a good worker.

Results of Survey

Of 2,483 employers questioned, 56.2 per cent regarded men over 40 as equal or superior to younger employes in psychological adjustability; 64.6 per cent as equal or superior in efficiency and 84.8 per cent as equally or more cooperative. Eighty-six per cent said the older men constituted the same or less of an accident risk.

Legion leaders declared that unless this middle-age employment problem is solved, democracy in this country is threatened.

"Unemployment brings about the more ready acceptance of alien isms," Kelly said. "A hungry man with a starving family can't live on platitudes and empty promises."

HOW TO TELL If you are CONSTIPATED And What To Do!

How often should your bowels move? That varies in different people. But Insurance Companies who want to protect your health—who want to keep you from constipation with its headaches, indigestion, bad breath, mental and physical fatigue say "1 to 3 times daily."

And here's sensational news about an IDEAL "daily" treatment for constipation. Tests at a World-Famous Hospital have proved that a little daily dose of Kruschen—(world-famous formula now in pleasant tasting, "bubbling" form)—actually helps Nature produce her own gentle "daily" complete bowel movements by keeping the waste in the colon moist, soft and easy to expel. Scientists report: "Kruschen can be taken for years without having to increase dosage."

Kruschen gives you more for your money, too! A jar that costs only a trifle lasts for weeks. Made in U.S.A.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Spencer Reveals "Peace Offer" from Jack Leslie as Delivered by Captured Intruder.

MY FATHER did not open his eyes until after the door had closed behind the man whom he had just been interviewing. Indeed, he kept his eyes closed until Lillian said softly: "He's gone, Chief," then he opened them, motioned us to seats, and smiled at our anxious faces.

"Let me put one fear of yours to rest," he said. "I am not exhausted. I am perfectly able to say to you now the few words that I must say at this time. So please let us have no protests that I am too tired to talk, or any suggestions that I rest for a little while before proceeding."

I think we all grinned a little sheepishly, for he had taken the words from our mouths. He continued speaking:

"I am going to tell you now certain things which you must remember carefully against the contingency that I might be—absent—when the final act of this melodrama is played."

Message from Leslie

His hesitation before the word "absent" was so slight as to be almost unnoticeable, but my heart knew instantly what he meant, and it was with almost miraculous effort that I repressed an agonized cry of alarm, and kept my face composed.

"As you have probably guessed," he went on, "this man was an emissary from Jack Leslie, sent to me to deliver a message which is the most egregious piece of effrontery I have ever seen."

He paused for a second, then spoke more rapidly.

"I can come to but one conclusion," he said. "Whatever mental balance Jack Leslie had, and he had much to plan some of his coups, must have slipped a cog. The man must have become insane, and as his cunning is probably just as great as ever, we must realize that we are dealing with something far more dangerous than a murderous criminal. We are facing a homicidal maniac. You can outguess the first, but never the second."

Leslie Has Emeralds

He paused again, and there was no sound, even of a single exhaled breath, as we waited for him to resume speech.

"His message," he went on, "is that he will call off what he is pleased to call his 'siege' of us, and will also deliver Queen Olga's emeralds intact upon two conditions."

I could almost hear us all exclaiming simultaneously: "So Jack Leslie has the emeralds after all!" but no one spoke aloud, and my father swept on.

"His conditions are that we dismiss all our guards and he says he will guarantee to do the same for his hide-away—which he defies us to find." At this statement my father smiled at Leslie's ignorance of the fact that he knew the location and almost every detail of the outlaw's elaborate hide-away, and had guarded the possible escape from their hideout by plane, boat or motor. "Then," he continued, "he says that we must deliver Noel and Mary over to him, and make no further inquiry as to their fate."

Agrees to Plan

As my father ceased speaking, our poise held no longer. Agonized exclamations of horror from Lillian and me, and equally horrified profanity from Dicky and Harry punctuated his astounding revelation. But no one of us dared to ask him what he had told Jack Leslie's emissary.

He waited until our exclamations had ceased, and then went on unperturbed.

"You probably are curious as to the reply I sent back to Leslie," he said, "and I am afraid you will censure it. But it is the only thing to do. I told him to tell his chief that I agreed to his every condition, and that when he sent back word to me, naming the rendezvous to which he wished Mary and Noel sent, I personally would accompany them thither."

Thinks He Has Plan

There was no gasp of horror from any of us this time, for we knew that my father, in familiar parlance, would "cut off his right arm" before delivering Mary and Noel into Leslie's murderous hands. But as he paused, Lillian spoke impulsively.

"I don't know what you've evolved in that head of yours, Chief, but I'll bet it's the last word in clever schemes."

Relocation of State Route Between Delaware and Stratford Is Proposed

Possibility of relocation of State Route 23 between Stratford and Delaware affecting property of the Marion-Reserve Power Co., was announced yesterday in Delaware when Robert S. Beightler, state director of highways, set Wednesday, March 27, as the date of hearing arguments for and against the proposed relocation. The hearing will be held at 10 a. m. in the Delaware headquarters of Division Six of the highway department.

The proposed route would begin at the south corporation line of Delaware, where the present road curves to the left, according to a Delaware news report. The route is used by virtually all Marion-Columbus traffic.

It would cross the lawn of the property owned by C. B. and Mabel S. Frisbie, necessitating moving the house farther back from the road, and would continue to the rear of the C. J. Mead barn buildings, continuing on a slight curve through properties to the west of the present route. Farthest point at which the route would pass from the present road would be on the L. W. Beecher farm, approximately 1,500 feet from the present road. At this point the road would curve slowly back toward the Stratford bridge, approaching of 1.856 miles and would pass that span in a straight line.

The route would be a distance through properties of the Marion-Reserve Power Co., the Methodist church, the A. C. Miller Co., and more than a dozen individual property owners.

Estimated cost of the new road is $155,000, not including cost of the right-of-way.

If the new route is built the present highway would revert to the Delaware county highway system, according to the news report. The new location, if approved, would be added to the state system immediately.

Although enough right-of-way would be purchased for a four-lane highway with a parkway in the center, planned for the future, state highway department officials reported that only one side of the proposed four lanes would be constructed at present. The road, of concrete, would be 22 feet wide.

Eleven Bouts Set for Tonight's Golden Gloves Car

Semi-Final Fights Will Start at 8; Battle Royal Also on Program; Finals Due Thursday.

ELEVEN bouts are carded for tonight's semi-final program of the Golden Gloves boxing tournament. The show, to be staged at the Marion Steam Shovel sports arena starting shortly after 8 p. m., will include a fistic battle royal.

Tonight's winners will qualify for the championship finals to be held Thursday night. All are shooting for the local crown of their respective divisions and with its the right to represent Marion in the Springfield A. A. U. tourney.

Bouts range from the flyweight (112 pounds) through the middleweight (160 pounds) division. Two scraps each will be between contestants in the middle, welter, light, feather and bantamweight groups with a lone melee in the flyweight division.

Several Look Good

Listed among the semi-final contestants are several leather-slingers who have gained considerable attention among those witnessing earlier matches. Joe Benedict, Harding High school athlete, will trade blows with James Casperson in one of the middleweight semi-finals.

Benedict was the class of last Thursday's show when he trimmed the plucky Merle Kleinknecht of Galion. Should he get by Casperson he will meet the winner of the Kenneth Bartee-Charles Hightower match, for the title.

A welterweight duel matching Marion's Otis Scott and Clarence (Red) Applegate of Bucyrus, brings together a pair of favorites. Scott won handily in his first appearance, getting a one-round technical knockout at the expense of John Turner of Marion. Applegate has two victories to his credit, eliminating Glendon Toops of Marion and Glen Dickason of Richwood.

The fistic gang fight will be an adventure in blackout scrapping by at least six and perhaps eight, youthful punchers. The boys, members of a Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class, will enter the ring blind-folded for the melee. Equipped with heavily padded gloves there's little danger of injury, yet the show annually provides a comic interlude for spectators.

List of Fights

Complete pairings for tonight's fights follow:

Flyweight — Robert Shelton (110) vs. Russell Smith (110), both of Marion.

Bantamweight — John Thorn (116) vs. Lloyd Holt (116), both of Marion; Eddie Talley (119) of Crestline vs. Ken Gracely (119) of Bucyrus.

Featherweight — Dan Mathews (127) of Marion vs. Sam Walker (126) of Crestline; Eddie Johnson (124) of Marion vs. Bernard Rawls of Crestline (127).

Lightweight — Ralph Barlow (136) of Bucyrus vs. Howard Fields (132) of Richwood vs. Ray Hodges (132) of Marion; Monroe Forbis (135) of Marion.

Welterweight—Clarence Harrison (138) of Richwood vs. Jimmy Gilmore (147) of Marion; Clarence Applegate (147) of Bucyrus vs. Otis Scott (140) of Marion.

Middleweight — Joe Benedict (157) vs. James Casperson (180), both of Marion; Kenneth Bartee (160) of Marion vs. Charles Hightower (160) of Bucyrus.

OSHKOSH BEATS AKRON

By The Associated Press

OSHKOSH, Wis., March 12—The Oshkosh All Stars, western division champions, turned on the heat in the last quarter last night to defeat the Akron Firestones, eastern division winners, 47 to 37 in the first clash on the five-game playoff for the national pro basketball league championship.

"WHAT'S GOING ON?" REDS' FANS HOLLER

Champs Lose Four Straight Games, Last to Yanks.

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, March 12—"What," demands the multitude on the banks of the Ohio, "the blankety blank is going on down there?"

Being tried and true students of the academic as well as emotional side of baseball, Cincinnati fans know perfectly well that games in the citrus circuit don't cut any ice when the great book is closed in October. Just the same, their beloved Reds, champions of the National league and technically only four games off the world championship, have lost every single day they've gone out to play ball so far this spring and that's four days.

The devil of it is that two of the losses have been by one run and two games have gone extra innings. The Brooklyns took the opener, 9 to 6, in ten innings, and the second game, 11 to 10, in 12. The Red Sox had the third, 13 to 10, and the New York Yankees (yes, the same ones as done it before) downed the Reds yesterday, 8 to 7.

Losing to Brooklyn had some alibi, for the trolley Dodgers had been training two weeks longer. But the Red Sox threw a batch of damp-eared children at the Reds and the Yankees managed to get along without Joe DiMaggio.

It hasn't been the hitting. The Reds blasted out 40 safeties in the four days, and scored 33 runs. The fielding with six errors in all, wasn't so bad, considering the "unusual weather."

So it boils down to the pitching and the breaks and both ought to cancel out between the Reds and the opposition. So far Manager Bill McKechnie has seen just two men, Paul Derringer and Gene Thompson, really pitching. The rest of the staff has walked a score of men and passed out hits like Christmas candy.

Now, be it granted that nobody's really loosened up yet. Be it granted that the Reds annually won the grapefruit championship in the years when they couldn't get out of second division.

But ask your Red fan to take a discount on that. A ball game's a ball game to him and a victory —grapefruit or the McCoy—is negotiable currency in his world of fancy. So when the score comes in he howls:

"What the blankety-blank is going on down there?"

SEABISCUIT'S CAREER ENDED, OWNER SAYS

LOS ANGELES, March 12—The racing days of the gallant Seabiscuit are ended.

He ran his last, and greatest race when he captured the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap March 2. The king is now retired.

A brief, but formal, announcement yesterday by wealthy Charles S. Howard, the owner, wrote finis to the career of this turf idol. Seabiscuit, he said, will race no more.

Now the greatest all-time money winner in the history of the sport—he'll graze on his master's California ranch, far from the turf wars.

Seabiscuit, said Mr. Howard, simply, has earned retirement. His purse winning record of $437,730, set in the triumph of the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, will stand until another, but never a more gallant, champion comes along.

BRADDOCK IN RING AGAIN

CLEVELAND, March 12 — Jimmy Braddock, former world heavyweight champion, will be in Bob Tow's corner when the Washington fighter meets Buddy Knox of Dayton in a 10-round heavyweight bout here March 27.

If All Those Rule Changes Come True—

By The Associated Press

IF CURRENT proposals to change basketball rules go into effect next season even the best informed fan may have trouble identifying the revised game.

Each year a few coaches manage to whittle out a suggestion or two to "improve the game." This year they've gone into mass production.

The result is a flood of ideas that range all the way from elimination of the backboards to a plan which would have both teams shooting at one basket.

Central target for this bombardment of new ideas is the tall guy, the six-foot-sixer who does just about what he pleases with basket rebounds under present rules.

Columbia's coach, Paul Mooney (his tallest man has to stretch way up to hit six feet), came up with the no backboard idea. His argument is simple: Do away with the backboards and you do away with the rebound off the backboards. Do away with the rebounds and you take away most of the advantage of players' height.

Allen Leads Field

Dr. F. C. Allen, head of basketball's national research committee and one of the most prolific suggesters in the game, tossed in another aimed at the big fellows who park under the basket and merely reach out with the ball and drop it—not shoot it—through the hoop.

He suggested that the baskets be raised two feet to a height of 12 feet from the floor.

That's just one of many ideas by Allen. A number of mid-western coaches suggested that the basket's circumference be enlarged. Allen came back with a proposal that the size of the ball be reduced. Said he:

"Balls wear out rapidly and I think it would be much cheaper to decrease the size of the ball than to force everyone to purchase new hoops."

He pointed out that the original basketball was 27 inches in circumference, that rules ballooned it to 32 inches and then reduced it to its present 29½ inches. He also urged that some of the bounce be taken from the ball so that fewer shots will hop out of the ring. Both factors would also produce better ball handling, he believes.

Another of Allen's pets is a plan to have the basket as the center of a 16-foot circle. Offensive players could dribble into or out of the circle, but could not drive into the area for a lay-up shot if another player were in the ring. The defense, by stationing a man there, could make the area a virtual "no man's land" for the offense.

Ken Loeffler, cage coach at Yale, came out shortly thereafter with a modification of that plan. He would mark off a semi-circle with a 14 foot diamenter (seven feet on each side) under each basket.

No player would be permitted to invade the area until the ball had touched the rim or backboard. Occupancy of the zone would be limited to three seconds.

Loeffler says most rebounds fall just outside of his "no man's land" and contends that the idea would solve the "tall man" problems.

Take all the dozens of proposals, mix well, and throw 'em into use and next year's basketball court will have traffic officials, stop-and-go lights and 10 basketball players who can't watch the ball for keeping track of all the floor-markings.

New Philly and Smithfield Tops Among Tourney Entries

But There Are Usually Upsets in the State Meet; Play Starts Thursday.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., March 12—If there's anything to this "third time's the charm" adage, New Philadelphia stands a good chance of winning its first Ohio Class A cage title.

If championships were decided on form—which they usually aren't—H. R. Townsend, high school athletic commissioner, could quit fretting about the state tournament here Thursday, Friday and Saturday and ship the gold-plated trophies to New Philly in Class A and Smithfield, Jefferson county, in Class B.

They have the best records of the 16 teams in each division and New Philadelphia has beaten four of the other Class A contenders. New Philadelphia, along with Akron Buchtel and Findlay, is in the tourney for the third consecutive year.

Usually Upsets

The pressure of 44 games in three days usually causes several form upsets and that's why the 30 teams besides the two favorites will be coming to this year's 18th annual classic for more than just the ride.

New Philly's Black and Gold cagers built up an average point advantage of 14.6 in winning 21 straight games, while Smithfield's edge was 22.7 in annexing 29 games without a loss.

Two other undefeated Class A teams, Cincinnati Woodward 20-0, and Canton McKinley 19-0, and Defiance 21-1, also will be definite threats for top honors. Woodward's average advantage over opponents has been 13.9, McKinley's 13.6 and Defiance's 13.4.

Other leading Class B. contenders are Glenford with 20.8 and New Carlisle with 16.6. New Carlisle and Glenford have chalked up 25 and 23 victories, respectively, to single losses.

Here are the best and worst offensive and defensive teams:

Best Offense—Class A)—Martins Ferry 49; (Class B)—Smithfield 51.4.

Poorest Offense—(Class A)—Toledo Waite 28.3; (Class B)—Marysville 29.6.

Best Defense—(Class A)—Akron Buchtel 19.5; (Class B)—Germantown 19.5.

Poorest Defense—Class A) — Martins Ferry 36.5.

Class B—Bluffton 29.8.

Twenty-three of the 32 teams awaiting the opening whistle at 1 p. m. Thursday have been rolling along at a point-a-minute clip.

In the first round, though, Smithfield's high-powered scoring machine, which has doubled the score on most of its opponents this year, crashes headon into Germantown's leading defensive team for Thursday's Class B feature.

Class A Headlines

The Class A headliner will pit Martins Ferry against Canton McKinley.

Tournament teams which lost to New Philadelphia in regular season play are Marietta, 46-32, Massillon, 33-32, Akron South, 47-31, and Bellevue, 39-26.

Meet Mr. Paychek, Next on Louis' List

He's Baldish, But His Opponents Find His Left Is Tough.

By The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Ia. — A little more than two years ago, Johnny Paychek, a baldish young man who won't be 26 until June 21, probably had few ideas about meeting Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship of the world. Now he is in training for a bout with Joe on April 3.

He had gone into retirement after a brief professional boxing campaign following sensational Golden Gloves performances. He working at a small-pay job in Chicago with little thought about returning to the heavyweight wars.

But Harold Steinman, a suave manager, persuaded Johnny to come out to Des Moines where he would be handled by Pinkie George, a shrewd little promoter and manager.

So Johnny landed in the tall corn state to rebuild a boxing career. First, though, there was work to get. Pinkie landed his new protege a job in a hotel as a bellboy. That's how Johnny got his "Belting Bellhop" moniker.

Paychek's first Des Moines appearance was in a preliminary against Max Steele in April, 1938. Johnny won in the second round by a knockout. His flashing, knife-like left cut Steele down with little trouble. The kid had it, the fans said.

Paychek moved up to top billing in a hurry under the maneuvering of promoter and co-manager George.

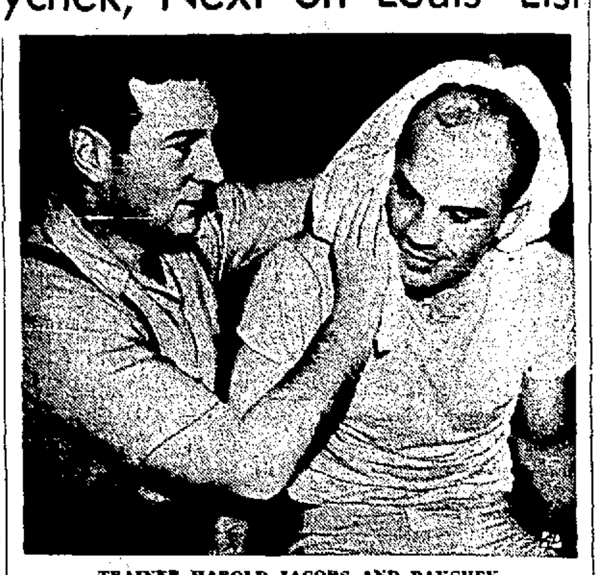
Bald Johnny's first reverse in 24 fights was a close newspaper decision to Maurice Strickland here last June.

He got that one back, though, by beating out a decision over Strickland six weeks later.

Paychek is a likeable chap. On the intellectual side, he goes for poetry. His Polish ancestry gives him a natural interest in music and he plays a violin acceptably.

Quiet, unassuming, Johnny is a tenacious battler in the ring. He's fast for a heavyweight and may give Louis an interesting evening.



TRAINER HAROLD JACOBS AND PAYCHEK

Johnny may give Joe "an interesting evening."

Council Votes Down Zone Transfers

residential zone is uncertain, however.

Mr. Williamson pointed out that Mr. Lawrence wanted the property transferred solely in order to make improvements which he understood could not be made while the property was in the residential zone. Several councilmen expressed fear that later the property might be used for something else than a grocery store, but Mr. Williamson assured council that it would be used as a grocery store. However, some councilmen also feared what use might be made of the property if Mr. Lawrence should dispose of it.

In answer to a question from Councilman Cass, City Solicitor Kenneth Robinson said he does not believe council has the power to specify in transfering legislation the use to which a property shall be put. Mr. Lawrence had sought to transfer the property for use only as a grocery.

Mr. Williamson pointed out that the request for the transfer was granted by the city planning commission and regularly referred to council and Feb. 12 set for the public hearing.

"At that time there was no opposition to the transfer," he said, "but for some reason the hearing was postponed. At the next meeting it was postponed again and now there is opposition."

He declared that the transfer bears the approval of practically all the adjoining property owners, among them the People's Building Savings & Loan Co. and the Fahey Banking Co. "who would certainly know if the transfer would be detrimental to their properties."

24 Sign Protest

The petition in opposition was signed by 24 persons living in the vicinity of the store. They contended the transfer would substantially reduce the value of their property; that the location is so far removed from the main commercial district that there is no possibility of the entire neighborhood being included in the commercial district.

Before the vote, Mr. Biggert commented that he could not see how use of the property as a grocery could affect the property values. He said he understood that the property could not be changed to some other use later without approval of the planning commission. There was some question about this however.

In reply to questions from Councilman Cass, Attorney Williamson said that Mr. Lawrence plans to change the entrance and the porch and make a "nicer looking front."

Solicitor Robinson said that Mr. Lawrence could make the improvements with approval of the planning commission, even though the property is in the residential zone.

As the vote was taken, Mr. Cass and Councilman George Primm voted no with the understanding that this alternative course was open to Mr. Lawrence. The others made no reservations in their no votes.

Action on Evans Property

The second request for a property transfer, that of Mr. Evans on Park boulevard, was taken up immediately. It too had been postponed from the last meeting, when only seven of the nine councilmen were present.

It was brought out that there were no protests to the transfer. The property is located at Darius street and Park boulevard across the street from the Standard Oil Co. plant and abuts on the Pennsylvania railroad property. The clerk reported that all property owners nearby had approved the transfer. Mr. Evans, who started up his business in November with the informal approval of city officials, lives in a house adjoining the coal yard.

Despite the fact that no nearby owners protested, council rejected the transfer. The no votes were cast by Councilmen M. Basil Williams, Harry Wilhelm and Harry Cahill. Mr. Williams explained he cast his no vote "in order to be consistent."

Concilman Cass brought up the question of welding shops in various parts of town which he understands will seek to be transferred to the commercial zone. He declared that persons living near such shops cannot use their radios while the welding machines are operating and asked council to take this into consideration.

Oppose Factory Project

Another matter affecting properties came up when Mrs. Mary R. Korte, owner of the Werley hotel on Hoyle street, and her son, Francis S. Korte, objected to parts of a recent application by the American Malleable Casting Co. The company has applied for permission to vacate Cayuga street and part of Hoyle street and two alleys in connection with plans to build an addition to its plant on West Center street. The company owns most of the adjoining property.

However, Mr. Korte, speaking for his mother, said that the closing of part of Hoyle street would make Hoyle street a dead end. He suggested that there be some way left open so that the street would not be blocked off.

He said there was a danger of fire hazard, that the proposed change would hamper operation of the hotel and would inconvenience their guests, mostly railroad men.

Councilmen Hayse Rogers and W. A. Dorsey, heads of committees which investigated the company's application, reported informally that conditions such as Mr. Korte described do exist.

Miscellaneous Business

Councilman Primm referred to a previous complaint concerning a sidewalk condition of Bartram avenue, which had been reported as satisfactory by a council investigator. Mr. Primm said the investigator should go out when it rains and the water measures three inches over the walk.

Councilman Williams complained of a street condition at Merkel and Uncapher avenues.

Council President Robert Stief directed the waterworks and fire department committee to report at the next meeting on a request of the Marion Water Co. to lay mains on several streets.

Earl J. Pierce, water company manager, reported on another matter, that the company probably would be willing to transfer two unused fire hydrants to more advantageous positions if the city pays the cost of removal.

Council President Stief directed the waterworks and fire department committee to discuss with the Marion township trustees the recent proposal that the township be included in the area covered by the city fire department.

Councilman Dorsey commented that in view of the current investigation being made by the National Board of Fire Underwriters "maybe we're not as good inside (the city) as we think we are."

Tax Proposal

The question of relief financing raised its head again, when Councilman Cass asked council to consider levying an occupational tax. Various aspects of it were discussed. Councilman Primm, who said he spoke for 900 workers, declared they would be opposed to having the tax taken from their pay envelopes before they received their money. The possibility of collection of such a tax by employers was also discussed.

Mr. Cass pointed to two advantages of an occupational tax over a property tax: 1. It would be more equitably distributed taxing people who work in Marion but who live outside and enjoy lower tax rates. 2. It would tax the people who are employed for those who are jobless.

It was brought out that probably the tax would not affect people who work here but who are paid elsewhere. Some thought this would exempt most railroad workers.

PARKS

provided at McKinley and Lincoln parks.

The city's fourth park, for which Councilman M. Basil Williams has been long fighting, will receive due attention this year, Mr. Cass said. The park, Roosevelt park, is located on Bellefontaine avenue about a block east of Edison school. Mr. Cass reported the park will be renovated and will be kept mowed and otherwise in good condition regularly.

Gives Financial Report

Mr. Cass last night reviewed the handling of the board's funds for the year consisting of $1,000 for salaries and a like amount for incidentals.

He reported a request from the American Legion, together with other civic and patriotic bodies, for use of the Garfield park pavilion for an address by Homer Chaillaux of Los Angeles, a Legion staff speaker and foe of "isms," here in June. The board voted to furnish the pavilion without charge.

The needs of the parks were also reviewed last night. For the last two seasons, Mr. Cass reported, more than 100,000 people each year have visited the parks, mostly in family reunions and picnics. Every state has been represented. Every state was represented at a single meeting about Labor day last year, when the United Bible Society of America gathered at Lincoln park, Mr. Cass said.

May Get More Tables

Mr. Harruff was appointed to investigate the cost of providing more tables. The present tables will handle about 1,800 persons, which the board considers insufficient.

Mr. Cass was directed to arrange for reconditioning of the power mowers.

Mr. Patton, who was present throughout the meeting, was given a vote of thanks for his services as secretary for the last three years.

LODGE AUXILIARY NAMES CENTRAL UNION DELEGATE

A mystery box award was won by Mrs. Ruth Griffith.

NAVY CLUB ARRANGES TO CHRISTEN CRUISER

Christening of the U. S. S. Marion, motorized replica of a cruiser, some time early in April was discussed at the Marion Navy club meeting last night at the armory. Navy clubs over the state will be invited to attend the ceremony.

Interesting statistics on the strength of the U. S. navy from 1828 to 1831 were read by Paul D. Reynolds.

LIONS CLUB HEARS AUDITOR OF STATE

Duties of His Office Listed by Joseph T. Ferguson.

The work done by the state auditor's office was described to members of the Marion Lions club yesterday by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

Speaking at a luncheon of the club at Hotel Harding, Mr. Ferguson explained how the office is operated and discussed several cases of public embezzlement the office has investigated in recent years.

In addition to auditing the books of several state departments, the auditor's office makes a checkup every two years of all city, county and township records in the state, covering a total of approximately 13,000 public offices. In addition, the department also audits all retail liquor stores operated by the state every 12 or 14 weeks, handles the state old age pension fund, the retirement funds for school teachers and state employes, sales tax redemption and state relief funds.

A total of 2,500,000 state bills are paid through the office every year.

Describing the expansion of the activities of the office in recent years, Mr. Ferguson pointed out that there were only 85 employes in the office when Vic Donahey was state auditor two decades ago while today the additional volume of work requires a staff of between 500 and 550 employes.

Guests were Howard Grimes, C. W. Snyder, State Representative Earl E. Thomas, Harry L. Dowler and James Ryan.

AUTOIST RUSHES SEASON ON 1940 AUTO PLATES

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., March 12 — Charles Doucher of Columbus today discarded a perfectly good—and almost unused—set of 1939 automobile license plates. He purchased them here Saturday after being arrested on a charge of operating a motor vehicle on 1940 license plates, before the law permitted such operation.

Doucher told arresting officers that he moved to Columbus recently from Detroit, that his 1939 Michigan tags can not be used legally after March 1, and that he purchased and used the new Ohio tags in the belief that the local law was similar to that in his former home state.

He paid $4 for a set of unused 1939 tags to continue his trip to Detroit but was permitted to retain his 1940 plates, purchased in Columbus last week.

Miss Anna Mae Crispin, George W. Sorreles and Fred P. Haas were elected delegates to the semi-annual state conference April 20-21 in Athens at a meeting last night of Marion Typographical Union No. 675 in Central Labor hall.

The charter was draped for the late Samuel E. Smith, veteran Marion printer who died last month at the printer's home in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The obligation of membership was given Carl J. Keller of Marion. Officers will be nominated at a meeting April 8.

Two New Highway Red Cross Stations Proposed for Operation in Marion Co.

Application Made To Establish First Aid Service at Green Camp and Waldo.

Tentative plans to open two highway Red Cross first aid stations, one at Green Camp and the other at Waldo, and progress of Marion county's participation in European relief were reported at the monthly luncheon meeting of the Marion County Red Cross chapter board yesterday at Hotel Harding. Miss Besse Kinsey, field director from the American Red Cross in Washington, D. C., was a guest.

Dr. F. L. Thomas, first aid chairman, announced that application to open the highway stations has been made to the American Red Cross. Further details as to location and personnel of the stations will be forthcoming upon receipt of approval of the applications, he said.

Mrs. Everett Grigsby, Junior Red Cross chairman, Homer D. Cole, disaster chairman, and Mrs. Paul Knauss, volunteer chairman, gave reports concerning European relief.

Contribution Made

The Junior Red Cross members at Thomas A. Edison Junior High school contributed $5 to Finnish relief at a council meeting last Saturday. The money, raised through a special program at the school, will be sent to Finnish children through the American Red Cross children's foundation.

The sum of $6.50 was collected for Finnish relief in the last month in Red Cross containers in the three Marion banks.

By Friday of this week another consignment of sweaters will be sent to New York for shipment to Poland or Finland. The county already has filled two quotas, consisting of 100 dresses and 135 sweaters.

Contributions from several Marion clubs to be used in carrying on the program of serving milk and wafers to undernourished children in the schools were reported by the nutrition chairman, Mrs. Francis Hurst. Mrs. J. C. Ackerman, home hygiene chairman, reported that outing flannel is being made up into layettes and baby blankets for the chapter's loan closet.

New First Aid Class

Organization of a junior first aid class for Girl Scouts, under instruction of Miss Marie Johnson and Miss Margaret Kunze, was reported by Dr. Thomas. He also told the board of a recent public meeting at which 100 standard first aid certificates were awarded a class which included all drivers of Marion county school buses.

Forty-one garments for layettes were donated to the chapter by a local organization and seven volunteers gave 19 hours to making 15 layette garments, Mrs. Knauss reported.

Miss Lillian Plack, executive secretary, reported 208 office interviews and 72 visits to homes during the month. Nine cases involving war veterans were completed, she told the board, six of which concerned burial allowances, two for pensions and one for investigation. Her report included an account of one case in the last month in which the chapter office, through its bureau of army affairs in Washington, D. C., located a former Marion man who had not been heard of by his family in nine years. The office was contacted on a Saturday by the family because of the illness of the man's mother, and two nights later the man, located in Alacama, was at his mother's bedside.

The meeting was presided over by J. B. Ellis, chapter chairman. The next meeting will be April 8.

HOUSE TO REPLACE PART OF FARM CUTS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 12 — Economy blocs reluctantly agreed with jubilant farm state members today that the house would up hold some of the prospective senate increases in farm appropriations.

Although the billion dollar measure will not be debated in the senate for several days, it appeare likely that about $200,000,000 for parity payments would be added.

The possibility of a parity fund set house members to talking once more about a tax bill, which they said would be mandatory if other economies were not effected and the statutory debt limit of $45,000,000,000 actually was reached.

"You fellows remember that a vote for these increases is the same as a vote for a tax bill," a Democratic member of the ways and means committee privately advised five congressmen from his state.

Girl Scout Week Opens; Dance To Be Held Friday

Observance of Girl Scout week, which started Sunday will be climaxed with a St. Patrick day dance Friday night from 8:30 to 11:30 at the Thomas A. Edison Junior High school gymnasium. Women of the Girl Scout council will chaperone the affair. St. Patrick's day favors will be given to all couples. Miss Martha Miller is chairman of arrangements for the dance.

More than 200 Marion girls are taking part in the week's observance. Some time during the week each troop will be visited by a council member to collect the Juliette Low fund. Each Scout and adult in Scouting contributes one penny each year to the fund, which is used to send girls to an international encampment and to give aid to Scouts in war-torn areas.

Throughout the week the various troops will celebrate the twenty-eighth anniversary of the organization of Girl Scouts in America. Among activities planned are the following:

Troop 15, investiture service for four new Scouts and awarding of merit badges; Troop 10, birthday party with Miss Ruth Kramer and Miss Ruth Kleinmaier speaking on their last summer's trip through the west; Troop 17, a birthday play Thursday night at the Quinn Chapel A. M. E. church on Park street; Troop 6, a birthday tea to pass the hostess badge test.

A few inquiries were received for graded threeeighths and half-blood territory wools but the prices bid were considerably lower than holders were willing to consider. Quotations on fine wools were unchanged but largely nominal, due to the lack of trading.

RAIN, PEACE RUMORS BREAK WHEAT PRICE

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, March 12. — Russian-Finnish peace rumors and more moisture in the southwest served to unsettle the wheat market today and prices declined approximately a cent after an uncertain start.

Confidence sagged when reports, unconformed but given strength by frequent repetition, that an armistice in Russian-Finnish hostilities appeared near. The recurrent rumors drove prices to the day's lowest point shortly before trading ceased. Trade volume was narrow all through the session.

Wheat closed weak, but a quarter cent or more above the lows and 1-1⅛ cents below yesterday's finish, May 1.03¼-½, July 1.01-1.01⅛; corn ⅛-½ lower, May 55⅝-½, July 56½; and oats ⅜-½ down.

Cash wheat was ½ to 1 cent lower; basis unchanged; shipping sales 80,000 bushels; receipts 2 cars; corn unchanged to ½ cent lower; basis unchanged to ½ cent down; shipping sales 1,500 bushels; booked to arrive 37,000; receipts 75 cars; oats unchanged to 1 cent lower.

MOTORS, STEELS LEAD MARKET

Gains of a Point or So Are Extended to Other Issues.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 12—Motors and steels led a stock market rise today as brokers reported covering movements by "short" traders.

Gains of a point or more extended into farm implements and some of the miscellaneous manufacturing issues toward the fourth hour.

Premier Daladier's assertion that 50,000 allied soldiers were ready to fight the red army in defense of Finland was received by traders as a prelude to expanding war orders. Earnings prospects by motor companies gave vigor to the upturn.

Topping the advances were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Harvester, Westinghouse, U. S. Gypsum, Douglas, United Aircraft, International Paper preferred, American Telephone, DuPont and Celanese. The last three set new year's highs.

Bonds generally improved. Commodities tended upward. Foreign markets were firm in moderate dealings.

Interest in automotive shares was heightened by the observation of Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., that present conditions in the industry are "satisfactory," although necessarily on a day-to-day basis due mainly to uncertainties in the export field.

most of these boys, not including Lewis, were in rompers. He voted for all the reforms of the Wilson administration, led yearly scraps in the house against what he called the three M's—Mellon, Morgan and Mills.

If it were not for the bitterness from this source, he would be the unquestioned, outstanding candidate for the Democratic nomination. He qualifies for it by all other considerations: his successive steps upward from Texas legislator to the house, to speaker of the house, to vice president; his expert background in fiscal and foreign affairs committees in the house; the respect for his judgment on government and politics as evidenced in the continuous private calls of Democratic legislators to his office for counsel and advice. He was even born in a log cabin.
